Section VIII

THE STATE PAGES

The following pages present individual summaries on the several states, commonwealths and territories.

First appears a summary of the events in 1958-59 that made Alaska and Hawaii, respectively, the Forty-ninth and Fiftieth States of the Union.

A tabular page next presents certain historical data on all of the states, commonwealths and territories.

Individual state pages follow for each jurisdiction. Included in them are listings of various executive officials, the Justices of the Supreme Courts, officers of the legislatures, and members of the Commissions on Interstate Cooperation. Listings of all officials are as of December, 1959, or early 1960. Concluding each page are population figures and other statistics, provided by the United States Bureau of the Census. Most of the data on these pages, however, were provided directly by agencies of the states themselves.
Alaska and Hawaii
The Forty-ninth and Fiftieth States of the Union

In 1959 Alaska and Hawaii became the Forty-ninth and Fiftieth States, respectively, of the United States of America.

In both cases the movements for statehood had continued for many years. A train of events during the biennium 1958-59, in Congress and in the two territories, crowned the efforts with success.

Alaska had become a territory of the United States in 1812, forty-five years after its purchase from Russia in 1867. On May 28, 1958, the United States House of Representatives voted 208 to 166 for its admission to the Union. The Senate followed suit on June 30, 1958, with a favorable vote of 64 to 20 for the statehood bill. President Eisenhower signed the act on July 7.

As enacted, the bill called for a referendum vote in Alaska on three propositions before its admission as a state. Under these propositions Alaskans were to indicate that they (1) wanted immediate statehood, (2) accepted the boundaries of the territory as the boundaries of the state, and (3) accepted conditions as to transfer of public lands to the state and power of the President to withdraw certain military lands in emergency.

The people of Alaska went to the polls on August 26, 1958, and by overwhelming majorities approved all three referendum propositions. The President, on January 3, 1959, signed the admission proclamation. That completed the process. Alaska was our Forty-ninth State.

Hawaii became a territory of the United States in 1900, two years after the annexation of the former kingdom in 1898. On March 11, 1959, the United States Senate voted 76 to 15 for its admission to the Union as a state. The House of Representatives adopted the statehood bill on the next day, March 12, by a vote of 323 to 89. The President signed the act on March 18.

In a plebiscite held on June 27, the people of Hawaii voted overwhelmingly for statehood. The President made the statehood proclamation on August 21. Hawaii thus became the Fiftieth State of the Union.

Both Alaska and Hawaii had adopted their state constitutions years in advance of statehood—Hawaii in 1950, Alaska in 1956. Both constitutions are regarded as among the finest in the nation. With the constitutions in effect when statehood arrived in 1959, and with executive officers and the legislatures elected accordingly, organization of the governmental structures of the two states proceeded immediately.

(Extensive series of articles on the two new states have appeared during 1958-60 in State Government, published by the Council of State Governments: on Alaska in the quarterly issues of Autumn, 1958, and Winter, 1960; on Hawaii in the issue of Summer, 1959.)

LEGISLATURE

President of the Legislature: WALTER I. M. HODGE
Legislative Secretary: JOHN L. MADURO

The Legislature is composed of eleven members known as Senators. The Virgin Islands are divided into three legislative districts as follows: the District of St. Thomas, the District of St. Croix, and the District of St. John. Two Senators are elected from the District of St. Thomas; two from the District of St. Croix; one from the District of St. John, and the other six are At-Large and are elected by electors of the Virgin Islands as a whole. The term of office of each member of the Legislature is two years. Regular sessions of the Legislature are held annually, commencing on the second Monday in April, and continue in regular session for not more than sixty consecutive calendar days in any calendar year.
